American Near East Refugee Aid (ANERA) is a non-profit, charitable organization working to increase assistance in cash and kind from Americans to Palestinians and Lebanese. Most of ANERA's efforts are currently directed toward social and economic development in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. ANERA also responds to civilian emergencies, usually the result of conflict, and promotes peace by increasing American understanding of the region.

American Middle East Rehabilitation (AMER) is the medical division of ANERA. Before becoming part of ANERA in 1971, AMER was the oldest non-sectarian American voluntary agency providing assistance to Palestinian refugees and other needy individuals in the Arab World. AMER assists medical programs in meeting their annual requirements of drugs and medical supplies and with emergency shipments in times of war.
Dear Friends of ANERA:

Fifteen years ago in 1968, ANERA was founded by concerned Americans in response to the human needs created by the new wave of Palestinian refugees resulting from the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. In the following years, we have undertaken countless projects, totalling about $10,930,000 in cash and kind. During times of peace, these projects have focused on assisting people in their efforts to improve their lives. During times of violence, which occur all too often in this volatile, but important region of the world, we have responded with emergency relief, such as funds to help set-up field clinics and the provision of life-saving pharmaceuticals.

ANERA's fifteenth anniversary in 1983 was marked by the aftermath of yet another war: the invasion and occupation of south Lebanon and the siege of the Lebanon, the capital of Beirut. Due to your great generosity, we were able to render considerable assistance to all the people residing in that unfortunate country via a series of disaster relief and, subsequently, reconstruction projects. As I wrote last year, however, we should remember that Lebanon is not just a disaster, but also a country. It needs long-term help to rebuild — as well as the removal of all foreign forces.

To this end, and continuing a fifteen-year tradition of service in Lebanon, ANERA intends in the coming year to assist locally managed rehabilitation and reconstruction projects.

Side by side with this activity in Lebanon, ANERA has continued and plans to continue its important programs with Palestinian institutions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. ANERA agrees with the broadly accepted premise that Palestinian rights must be adequately addressed in order to end the cycle of violence in the Middle East. In this connection, we laud the President's September 1982 peace initiative which acknowledges the crucial importance of these rights and the Palestinians' future on the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

In order to foster these ends, ANERA maintains its strong emphasis on community and economic development projects, education, and health programs in direct cooperation with competent, indigenous Palestinian organizations in the militarily occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. These projects not only promote the social and economic welfare of the population, but also contribute to future peace in the region.

In our fifteenth anniversary issue of our Annual Report, we are focusing on the town and district of Hebron in the West Bank. The following section describes this beautiful but impoverished area, details a variety of projects ANERA has undertaken there, and tells our story of the last fifteen years. Also, in subsequent sections of the report are found complete project and financial reports for the past fiscal year.

HEBRON: TRADITION & INNOVATION

"In one hour and a half we came to rich, fertile valley, which coming from the south, enters the broad valley in which Hebron is situated. Vineyards, orange, lemon, fig, apricot and pomegranate trees were numerous. Small whitened buildings spotted the valley, in the midst of luxuriant olive groves, and the vineyards, rising on terraces each side of the valley, give to the whole scene a picturesque appearance...

"The mosque is the most imposing object in Hebron, and is regarded by the Moslems as one of the most sacred places in the Holy Land...

"The main bazaars are on a street near the mosque. There was an abundance of fruit, especially oranges and raisins. I noticed the latter as being particularly large and handsome...At the butchers' stalls was some excellent mutton. We ate of this kind of meat while at Hebron, and I have never seen better. In one part of the main quarter are several glass manufactories, for which Hebron has long been famous...

"Hebron is called by the Arabs " El Khalil Ibrahim, Abraham the Friend." It lies principally on the eastern side of the valley ascending back. The houses are all of stone, high and substantially built, with flat roofs...It is not walled around, but the entrances of several streets are by gates. Its population is variously estimated at from four to six thousand."
From the graceful orchards and vineyards north of Hebron to the desolate slopes of the east and south, to the rocky farmland to the west, the Hebron District encompasses a diverse agricultural area. Farmers in the north specialize in grapes; to the west in olives. Bedouins to the east, once the guides for intrepid visitors in the nineteenth century, still tend their sheep and goats on the dry slopes descending to the Dead Sea. Villagers along the high ridges cultivate wheat, and all are known for their brightly striped wool rugs.

But despite this colorful picture, life in the Hebron District is impoverished and difficult. Limited resources and rugged terrain combined with the economic and political stresses of military occupation, slow the development of agriculture, industry, education and health care. In our fifteen years of existence, ANERA has focused much effort on the needs and potentials of the Hebron District. A summary of ANERA's projects in Hebron outlines both the development of the West Bank as a whole and the development of ANERA as an organization. With this in mind, we dedicate this Fifteen Year Annual Report to the people of the district of Hebron, whose needs make ANERA's work necessary and whose hard work make it worthwhile.

Between the urban population of Hebron city and the rural population of the larger district, the needs of the people vary with their lifestyles. But the process of answering those needs is the same. ANERA works with existing Palestinian organizations, whether they be voluntary societies, cooperatives, municipal governments or educational institutions. Because such organizations naturally develop first in urban areas, ANERA's early work centered on the urban population of Hebron city itself.

Until 1976, the Municipality of Hebron had one small library housed in the municipal office building. In addition to the limited space available in the building, the library faced a second problem. Young women were hesitant to be seen going into the municipal building for fear it would seem improper. With the help of two grants from ANERA in 1976 and 1977, the Municipality built a light, spacious building across the street. A reading room for children, a special collection of college textbooks used in the West Bank universities for students, and a private room for women enable the library to answer some of Hebron's particular needs.

The library is not the only institution in Hebron that has made a special effort to help women improve their status. Founded in 1956, the Women's Charitable Society devotes itself to improving the quality of education, health care and social outlets for women in the Hebron area. Following two rules—that all training must be job-oriented and all participants be social caseworkers—the Society offers vocational training in embroidery, weaving and dressmaking, as well as physical therapy and maternal and child health care. ANERA has supported this self-help group with grants for equipment and construction since 1975. A proposed ANERA grant of $80,000 to help the Society finish construction of its new building has been available since 1981 but has not received the required Israeli Military Government approval.

A ready measure of the quality of life in any country is the level and availability of medical care. Close to the town center of Hebron stands the old Government Hospital. Its 100 beds comprise the only hospital facilities for the District's population of 200,000—a ratio of one bed for 2,000 people, and Gaza devoted to training mid-level technicians, and is expected to be a model for the development of similar schools elsewhere in the Occupied Territories. Recipients of two ANERA grants and awaiting approval to receive a third, HUGU trains 200 students, including a few women, in civil, electrical and mechanical engineering, and architecture.

Beyond the city limits, the scattered villages of the Hebron District comprise the poorest agricultural area in the West Bank. Struggling with rocky hillsides, limited water, poor access roads and few markets, the farmers in this area turn to cooperative efforts to collectively buy equipment, process and market their produce.

To the east of Hebron, the village of Tarqumiya houses one of the largest cooperatives in the Arab world, excluding Egypt. Over 1200 members have joined together to purchase modern olive presses, tractors and bulldozers to rework the rough terrain, and a greenhouse and irrigation equipment for a cooperative seedling nursery. The Cooperative also offers low-interest loans to its members enabling them to rent the heavy equipment to improve their own farmland and roads. ANERA has supported the Tarqumiya Cooperative with four grants since 1978.

Many of the villages to the south of Hebron are too distant to participate in the Tarqumiya Cooperative, and have established their own smaller cooperatives. In 1981 ANERA provided grants to six of these small cooperatives to help them purchase tractors, plows and cultivators for their members’ use. Diminishing land, lost by war or confiscation for settlements, and the high cost of labor due to competition in the Israeli market make intensified farming with machinery the only hope of these farmers.

With the ever-increasing difficulties of earning a living from the land, many villagers seek new trades. But carpentry, mechanics or ironworking all require electricity which many of these villages have for only a few hours each night. Once again, cooperatives provide the answer. ANERA helped five electrification cooperatives in the Hebron District purchase new generators that would provide their villages with daytime electricity. Purchased in 1981, these generators have already fueled the beginnings of light industry.

On a recent visit to the Hebron District an ANERA staff member sat on a stone wall in the backyard of a village home. The grandmother, tattooed and dressed in black, sat nearby. Looking with contentment at her chicken coop, beehive, well, outdoor oven, olive and fruit trees, she waved her hand and said, "We have everything here."

Amidst today’s political and economic stresses in the West Bank and Gaza, everything this village owns is sadly not enough. Electricity, running water, intensive agriculture, education and health care are the building blocks for survival. ANERA’s projects and others like them will help the people of Hebron retain what is good while overcoming what is difficult.

PROJECT ACTIVITY

In fiscal year 1983, extending from June 1, 1982 through May 31, 1983, ANERA and its AMER Medical Division gave assistance totalling $1,130,424. Of this amount, $808,303 was in cash grants and services, and $322,121 was in medical supplies, books and shipping.

ANERA’s fiscal year 1983 was exceptional both in terms of funds raised and projects implemented due to the war in Lebanon and that country’s extraordinary need for relief and reconstruction assistance. In addition to the medical supplies and shipping grants cited above, cash grants to Lebanon totalled $279,000. These grants included support to help rebuild two vocational training schools and a major rehabilitation center, support for university reconstruction and scholarships, purchase of electric generators and reconstruction of medical clinics, and provision of low-interest loans to small businesses damaged by the war.

ANERA also continued its support to over twenty institutions providing economic and community development, education and health services in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. In fiscal year 1983, ANERA again experienced serious delays in receiving grant approvals from the Israeli Military Occupation Authority for the expenditure of project funds. In addition to the projects marked with an asterisk on the following pages, ANERA has close to $1,000,000 in grant funds from the U.S. Agency for International Development which are pending approval of the Israeli authorities.

A special grant was also made in the Yemen Arab Republic for a disaster relief fund to aid the victims of a devastating earthquake in December 1982 which left 700,000 people homeless. ANERA cooperated with the U.S.-Arab Chamber of Commerce to solicit disaster relief funds from over 500 corporations in the U.S.
