“I love Lebanon and don’t want to leave to find work. I will stay here despite all the odds and hope that one day, with the efforts of young people like me, we will rise again and create an even stronger nation.”

– 18-year-old Mohammad attended Anera’s mobile repair course in Lebanon, adding to his list of skills in IT, where he sees a future for himself.

“We do Model UN each year but struggle because of the lack of space. Now, with the expanded building, I have the space to develop my ideas, host other schools, and expand the program.”

– Waheba is the head of the English and French departments at the Rosary Sisters School in Gaza. Anera added to the school a new floor with five classrooms.

“This preschool building program is important for many reasons: children will have access to vital care and education; the ministry will employ women teachers in poor communities and the new preschools will act as training centers for new teachers. A truly sustainable project to benefit many generations to come.”

– Sulieyman Mleahat, Anera’s education program manager in Palestine, on the new preschool Anera built in As-Sammu in the West Bank.

// The drug shortages have really damaged my physical and mental health. I can't afford to buy the medicine. And doctors have tried alternatives but they really haven't helped. Now that I have access to adalimumab again, I can live my life normally."

– Solيمان, 24, lives in Gaza and has Crohn's – a debilitating disease for which he needs regular treatments. Anera delivered his medicine and he is himself again.

// I respond to any fire or explosion in the Beirut metro area. Our ambulances drive with the fire fighting trucks, so we can attend to both fires and injuries. We've been suffering from a lack of finances for years, and we have a huge need for new equipment and supplies."

– Mashhoor, a paramedic with the Beirut Fire Brigade, talks of some of the needs Anera helped to fill with a shipment of kits customized for wildfire response and burn injuries.

// I can no longer pay for the generator bill. Its prices have gotten very high, and it doesn't even provide many hours of electricity...[the Solight] helps us move around the house at night. It's much safer than candles, and costs us nothing!"

– Fairouz, a 40-year-old Syrian mother of five in southern Lebanon, speaks of the solar-powered lantern Anera provided to her family.
